

Jeffrey Vacirca, MD, FACP

Jeffrey Vacirca, MD, FACP is a triple board certified oncologist at the North Shore Hematology Oncology Associates (NSHOA) on East Setauket, New York where he serves as CEO and managing partner/director of clinical research. His specialties include breast cancer, prostate cancer, and complicated cancers.

Currently, Dr. Vacirca is the vice president of the Community Oncology Alliance (COA), the strategic advisor and medical director for Amerisource Bergen specialty group, and is on the Excel Advisory Panel to the International Oncology Network. He has been the recipient of the Theodore Roosevelt award for outstanding dedication to patient care and has been named in Newsday's Top Doctors. He serves as the president of Mather Memorial Hospital's PHO and sits on the hospital's Breast Cancer Leadership Committee as well as chairman for the Managed Care Committee for Long Island Health Network PHO. Dr Vacirca is the co-founder and president for National Translational Research group and holds a position for Caris Life Sciences as a Scientific Advisory Board Member, and is the medical director for LIAC Long Island Aids Care. He recently expanded his efforts to serve as a medical board advisor for Flatiron Health, located in New York City.

Dr. Vacirca received his medical degree from St. George's University and completed his residency in Internal Medicine and fellowships in hematology and medical oncology at Stony Brook University Hospital and in his final year of training was named Chief Fellow.

His academic appointments include Assistant Professor of Medicine and Medical Director of Outpatient Oncology Services at Stony Brook University Hospital.

Dr. Vacirca has authored numerous articles on cancer treatment and has published multiple research studies and implemented the Prostate Cancer Vaccine Therapy Center on Long Island, New York, and is a national speaker on both breast and prostate cancer.

Media Contact: Chase Communications

Julie Chase
(202) 997-8677

jchase@chasepr.com

Anita Weissman
(312) 850-0558

aweissman@chasepr.com